Welcome to our Vets Love Pets May/June newsletter.

Hello

Winter is just around the corner and now is the perfect time to get your pets ready for the chilly season! In this edition of our Vets Love Pets newsletter we share some helpful tips on how to keep your pet active, protect them against parasites and keep them comfortable as they age. If your furry family are a bit older, don't miss our articles on blood testing and kidney care! If your best friend gets distressed when you leave, check out our article on separation anxiety for some valuable tips.

Do you know someone who loves their pet just as much as you do? Share this newsletter with them so they too can learn about how to care for their pets and give them a long happy life. We hope these articles help you and your furry family for many years to come!

INTRODUCING DR HENRY PANG VETERINARIAN (BBIomed DVM)

Dr Henry Pang is the newest member of the Melton Vet team. Henry graduated from the University of Melbourne in 2015 and started his career in a mixed animal practice in southeast Gippsland as a dairy cattle veterinarian. After spending 2 years out in the country, he returned home to focus on small animals. Henry enjoys all things general practice but has a particular interest in small animal medicine. He enjoys spending time with his tabby cat Rodger, who he adopted while out in the country. Visit our website to learn more about our team.

You know your pets best

A proactive approach to health and wellness will help your pets enjoy a longer, happier life.

The bond we have with our pets is very special. Pets are part of our families and as a pet parent you know your fur babies best. You know their favourite toys, how they like to have their dinner and all of their cute (and sometimes quirky!) habits. You also know what is "normal" for them in regards to their health, their energy levels and even their favourite foods.

Mobility tips to help protect your best friend from arthritis

Keep your best friend active this winter.

Advances in veterinary care mean that our beloved pets are living longer than ever. This extended lifespan is wonderful and our pets need extra care as they age to ensure they can enjoy a good quality of life in their senior years. We want to keep your best friend active and happy this winter and our vets have prepared some tips to help you protect your pet from arthritis.

Worms: Protecting your family from nasty parasites

Does your puppy dog love to give you pet kisses? Does your feline friend help themselves to your coffee cup or sneak a bit of your food from your plate?

Desexing: The perks of getting your pets snipped

Next time you visit our hospital please ask for a tour to see our surgical theatre!

When your new puppy or kitten has their vet check we will discuss sterilisation with you (also known as desexing, neutering, castration or speying). There are many reasons why we recommend desexing your pet and some of these are outlined in the link below.

Kidney Care: Helping prevent kidney disease in your feline friend!

Dedicated to helping our feline patients live long and happy lives.

Recent advances in veterinary medicine are helping us to do this even better. We are thrilled to share with you an exciting breakthrough in blood testing technology for cats!

We can now do a quick blood test in our veterinary hospital (with results within minutes!) that can detect kidney disease in its' very early stages.

Blood testing - could extend your pet's life!

Pets age much faster than humans, imagine if you only went to the GP once every 7 years!

As pets get older we recommend a vet health check every 6 months. This enables our vets to do a full physical exam and they may recommend a blood test.

Because behaviour matters: Separation Anxiety

Does your pet get distressed or upset when you leave them unattended? As pet parents it can be very hard to leave our pets at home.

While it can be normal for pets to miss our company, some pets become very distressed and suffer terribly. Many dogs suffer from a behavioural condition called 'separation anxiety'. They become severely distressed and can even injure themselves.
